Eighth Annual Catalogue

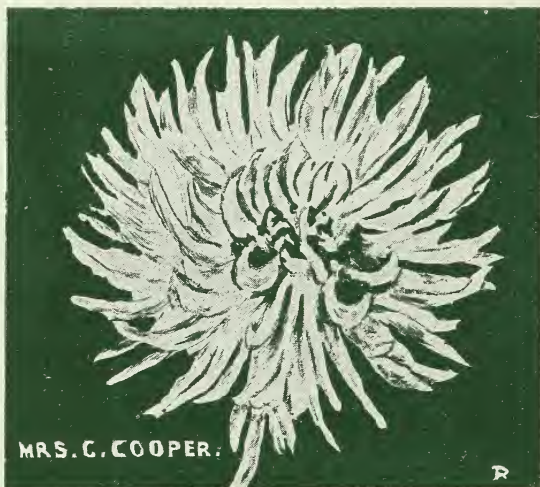

Dahlias, Gladioli, Cannas, Peonies,
Tulips, Hyacinths, and Narcissus

RICHARD BUYS

RIVER EDGE, NEW JERSEY

The Dahlia

The Dahlias named herein have been carefully selected by me from personal observation. You can rest assured they represent the highest perfected class in existence today, having straight and strong stems, very large flowers, beautiful colorings and free blooming habit. I can recommend all these varieties to you and your friends, and although my descriptions are short they are true, each word and bulb being guaranteed by me as represented.

King of the Autumn

I wish particularly to call your attention to the variety known as King of the Autumn. This variety originated in Holland, and the stock to a great extent is controlled by Messrs. Westerbeek & Klyn of 25 Beaver Street, New York. I can recommend this Dahlia very highly, the flowers being exceptionally large, the stems strong and erect, the plants having an excellent habit and the blooming qualities the best. As its name suggests, the colors are made up of beautiful autumn tints, and while my policy has been to make my descriptions short, concise and true, I have made an exception in the case of this most worthy of recent introductions.

The Gladiolus

The Gladioli represented herein are the best that can be had in the various colors. You will notice I have endeavored to list varieties which have strong spikes as well as large flowers and a great number of flowers to the spike. While there are a great many pinks, reds, whites, etc., etc., there is only one best pink, red, white, etc., and to this end I have worked for a number of years to give you the best of the respective colors.

PLANTING DIRECTIONS.

Spade the soil eight inches to ten inches deep.

The Canna

The Canna, as with other popular plants, are represented by superior varieties, and it always seems strange to me why so many people cling to the old, worthless varieties, that are not really worth the time, the trouble and the room given to them. No wonder so many people get discouraged. There is absolutely no difficulty to grow the Canna, and I can assure you those named below will heighten your ambition to grow rather than discourage. To my descriptions I can add nothing here, only would suggest that you give them a trial and you will always be a warm supporter, the same as I have become after having been practically dragged into trying out these beautiful flowers.

Flowers very large, green foliage, height 5 ft.

The Paeony

Like the Canna, it was necessary almost to force me to grow the Paeony, as my whole thought was for the Dahlia and the Gladiolus. Now I am extremely fond of the flower, and have decided to place before you a few exceptionally beautiful varieties, all of them being highly fragrant, good bloomers of exceptional size, having strong stems and beautiful colorings. As they bloom early in the spring and the beautiful green foliage last till cut down by frost, do you not think they would make a grand addition to your already pleasant surroundings? My offerings are strong two year old clumps.

PLANTING DIRECTIONS.

Spade the soil eight to ten inches deep.

Plant the clump so that the eyes will be from two to three inches from the surface of the ground.

Plant two feet apart each way.

Plant in August or September or early in the spring.

Plant in a sunny location.

Keep the ground well cultivated and free from weeds.

Keep well watered.

Do not dig up clumps in fall, but leave them in the ground.

Holland Bulbs

The selection of Hyacinths, Tulips and Narcissus named on the following page, I leave to your own good judgment if they do not represent the best to be had. Colorings, stems and quality are recommended highly.

ORDER NOW FOR FALL DELIVERY.

I would suggest that you send me your order now as you need not remit until the fall. Holland bulbs are likely to increase in price.

PLANTING DIRECTIONS.

Tulips: Outside: Plant from Sept. 15 to Dec. 1st, four to six inches apart, about three inches deep from top of bulb; in very light soil a little deeper. Cover the ground with ashes, old manure or straw as a protector.

Hyacinths: Outside: Plant from Sept. 15th to Dec. 1st, four inches deep from top of bulb, five to six inches apart, cover ground as for tulips.

Narcissus: Outside: Plant from Sept. 15 to Dec. 1st, three inches deep from top of bulb, four to six inches apart. Cover ground as for tulips.

Tulips: Inside: Plant three to five bulbs in five inch pot, the crown or top of the bulb to be just above the soil. Water well and place the pot on level ground outside, and surround and cover pot with a layer of six inches of ashes, and after two months bring in the house.

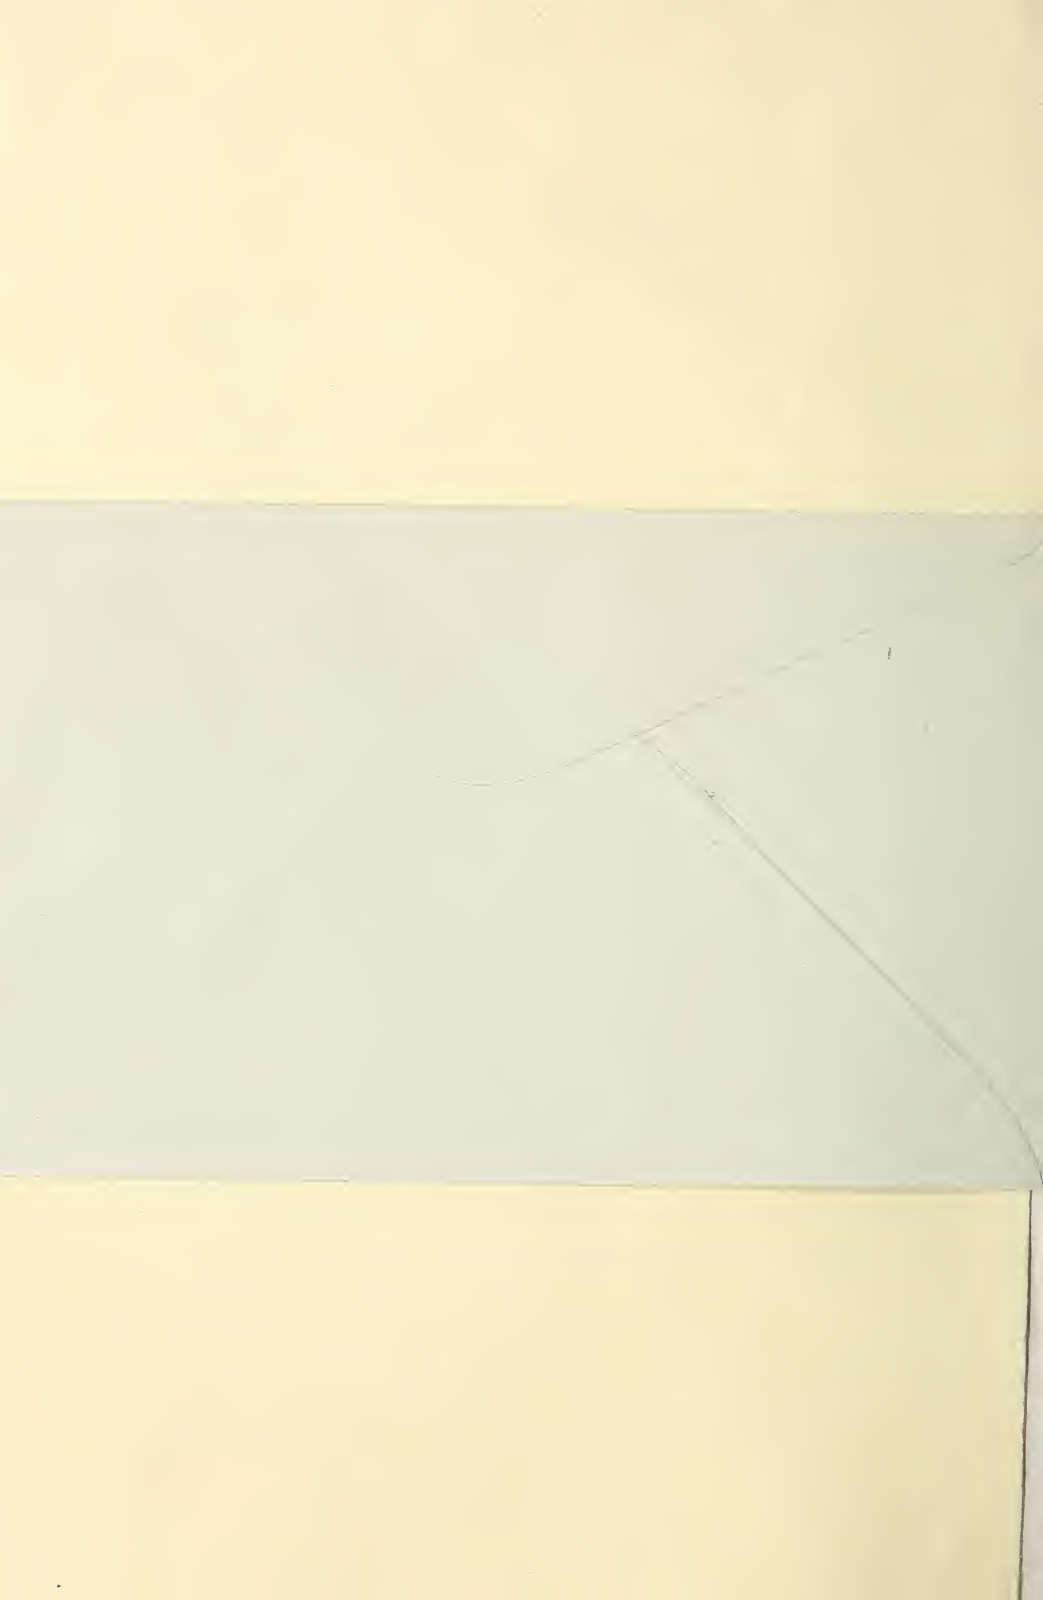

Hyacinths: Inside: Same directions as for Tulips, excepting one bulb to a five inch pot.

Narcissus: Inside: Plant same as for Hyacinths, excepting Paper Whites, which should be planted inside only, either in pebbles or water or in pots same as Tulips, and to be kept in the dark for about four weeks before bringing to light.
